BIO

Matthew Burkett is an investor and philanthropist with a proven track record for unlocking value in underutilized opportunities that result in growing wealth, increasing balance and giving back. He is a husband, father and professional globetrotting fly angler. He is the founder and CEO of The Flyfisher Group, a capital, consulting and holding company that specializes in growing sustainable assets. He has been described as "a visionary and operational genius for small businesses," and "a man who knows how to get things done." Burkett has founded more than ten companies in this twenty-year career and personally invested in over twenty small businesses. A passionate philanthropist, he serves his communities through The Burkett Family Foundation and Lincoln Hills Cares, enriching the lives of families, young people and the elderly.

LIFE WELL PLAYED

Matthew is focused on the ambition of living a "life well played." It drives his investment, management and philanthropic philosophies. It can be defined as "the tangible benefit of regular, predictable cash flow through multiple revenue streams; the intangible benefit received from investing in opportunities that align with interests and enhance quality of life and personal balance."
